

Goodnight, Bob White

Something in the world just didn't seem right before I learned of the passing of our Bob White God he was tough but saw something in me and the future of our inventors he handed the key It took a long year as he stood relieved he could relinquish control and now we must grieve His rough exterior fooled only some but he didn't fool the blonde, for she isn't dumb How he loved Betty and when she was gone so was his zest he was simply so lost he just couldn't rest Now he's at peace with Betty by his side as they join together for a heavenly ride And as all of you know from the time that we spent heaven is about to get more beautiful, Mr. White will reinvent

Bob, we had some rocky times and then I was able to honor you last year at the special luncheon. I will hold dearly the Robert and Betty White award I received. We will miss your grumbling words and know they just hid a soft heart. You never fooled me Sir and I felt your respect always. You left a legacy, and a blonde at the helm . . . GOD SPEED MY FRIEND!!!
